My attendance at school this term is 95%. I feel really proud of this because last year I was much lower. Now I am at school more, I participate in more learning, actually, all my learning. That means when I do my assessments, I feel confident.

I have improved by showing self-control, cooperating and collaborating and following classroom rules and routines. I normally get at least 12 tokens every day because I have excellent behaviour for learning. I am usually a role model to my peers and I like to help them with their learning.

Having friends at school helps me because it makes me feel included. I use to find it hard to keep friends but now I can and I am a loyal person.

Adults here help us by teaching us lots of things and they give loads of positive feedback like, 'Your learning is great and magnificent!'
